

Winging in for royal contract

A SMALL Llanelli aviation workshop hopes to take off in a big way after winning a contract with Arabian royalty.

Global Aviation Services, based in Parc Dafen, has just completed a contract to refurbish the private aircraft of the Crown Prince of the United Arab Emirates. The Llanelli workshops were set up when Min Aero was bought out by GAS a couple of years ago, creating 27 highly skilled engineering, manufacturing, customer service and after-sales jobs.

Chief executive and founder of GAS, Zeydan Oncu, said: "We are proud to get the mandate of his majesty for the complete refurbishing of his VIP aircraft."

"The technological contribution of GAS to Wales and

Death verdict

THERE were no death of the suspicious circumstances in the week-old boy at his death of a baby in Llanelli on Christmas Day, police have confirmed.

POLICE are investigating after a car was stolen from outside a Llanelli home.

The Black Vauxhall Corsa, registration NV52 WGY, was taken from Glenalla Road between 11.30pm on Sunday, March 1, and 4.15pm on Monday, March 2.

while sitting on a bench across the road — he was injecting in broad daylight. Another time we saw armed police swarming around a building after a stabbing — it's terrifying.

"I don't want to leave Llanelli but I'm desperate to get out of this area."

One Station Road shopkeeper, who did not want to be named, added: "Drink or drug-fuelled violent behaviour has been the norm in this area for the past 16 years. I get addicts stumbling into my shop totally out of their heads trying to sell me what I presume are stolen goods."

In the wake of last week's alleged murder of Richard Shrapnell at Ty Elizabeth, senior police officers have taken steps to reassure residents that the area is safe.

Dyfed-Powys Police Superintendent Aled Davies said: "Carmarthenshire is still one of the safest places to live, work and visit in England and Wales."

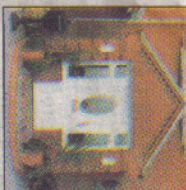

No-one at Carmarthenshire Council was available for comment.
